MEMORANDUM FOR: Mr. Charles Snodgrass

SUBJECT : Weekly Listing of Finished Intelligence

Chuck

Recently you asked for a listing of finished intelligence. I am enclosing machine runs for the weeks 21-25 April and 28 April to May.

As I mentioned to you, the machine can only retrieve what was put into it and I would not want to guarantee that this represents every item published in the community for these weeks. You also will note from the publications' dates that it sometimes takes several months from the time an item is published until it shows up in the computer. The computer is spitting out what it was fed last week, not necessarily what was written last week.

The machine and I agree that there was no point repeating the title of every daily and weekly publication. You are already familiar with these. Instead we are presenting you with a machine-eye view of intelligence monographs.

The computer is programmed to retrieve titles by searching for key words and this will result in an occasional repetition of a title. You also will note the organizations using the monographs are identified by a group of letters--for example, CIACRS represents the product of the Central Reference Service in CIA. I am attaching a key so you can track your way through this, but, in general, the first three letters designate the parent agency while the remaining alphabet stands for the component within that agency. The next column where you see such things as IM 0090/75 indicates the type of publication, an IM is an intelligence memorandum, a BR is a biographic report, and so forth.

We shall try to provide this listing for you on a weekly basis. Please note that the classification of this machine run reflects the highest classification of the material included and the run itself is sensitive because of the list it provides. I would appreciate it if you would return these to us via the regular couriers after you have had a chance to examine them.
